I have never said one thing without saying the other. Both those propositions I stand by to-day. If there has been any mistake or wrong in the past, Mr. William J. Bryan is as responsible for it as any man, as any tenmen in the United States since the treaty left the hands of the President. It was he who stabbed the cause of anti-imperialism in the back in the hour of its assured victory. "He says that he wanted to get the question out of the way and to restore peace, and that he trusted to a resolution of the Senate to prevent the mischief which the treaty would accomplish. The Senate was the stronghold, the citadel, the West Point of the eposition to what is called imperialism. It was agreed by everybody, it was distictly asserted by the President, that we had no title whatever to any part of the Phillippine Islands except by a treaty with Spain, which could be accomplished only by a twe-thirds vote of the Senate. The defeat of the treaty was as sure, as it seemed, as the rising of to-morrow's sun, with many votes to spare, when Mr. Bryan came in person to Washington to secure its adoption. He was the arknowledged leader of the Democratic party; he had been its candidate at the last election; he was sure to be at the next election. He put forth all his authority to induce his unwilling followers to change their attitude and to vote for the treaty in spite of the remonstrances of the wisest and most experienced leaders of the Democracy. It was as if some great military and political leader of the Revolutionary War had surrendered West Point to the enemy in the midst of the struggle, had got the Continental Congress to declare that we were the lawful subjects of Great Britain and that King George was our rightful sovereign, and said that he did it because he wanted peace, that he hoped later to get through a resolution somewhere wh ish treaty of 1899. "If this Spanish treaty be right President McKinley and Mr Bryan were both right. If this Spanish treaty be wrong, President McKinley and Mr Bryan were equally wrong. Now what are we to do for the future? I can find no substantial difference, when we come to any practical declaration of purpose, between the two candidates or the two parties on that question. There are men in both parties who say that we ought to hold on forever to this conquest. Some of them think fare of his neighbors and his fellow citizens, I cannot bring myself to support the candidate of the Democratic party. If I were offered a chance to vote for an independent Democrat at this time, I might feel that it was my duty to support him. As the conditions are at present, I feel that a vote for William Jennings Bryan would be a vote toward confusion in the financial world and against the best interests of the country at large. Every American citizen, in my opinion, should do the best he possibly can toward sustaining good government and the financial stability of his country.

out of the way, all the plans that had been made for fraud at the coming election would fall through.

Smith was another of the men mentioned by McCullagh in his recent letter to Chief Devery as a man to be watched right up to election day. Smith is about 40 years old and rather good looking. He looks anything but the fearless violator of the ballot that he is accused of being. His record cannot stand investigation, although some one around Police Headquarters has done as much as they could to clean it up for him. In the rogues' gallery there used to be a picture numbered 4,530. It was Smith's and it was taken in 1891, when he was arrested as a pickpocket by Police Captain Titus, who was then a detective sergeant. Since that time Smith's conduct has not been sufficiently exemplary to warrant the removal of his picture from the Police Headquarters collection. Supt. McCullagh says that he has been a gambler and pool-room proprietor ever since, and it is also said that he has spent much of his time around the racetracks. Nevertheless his picture was removed from the rogues' gallery by some kindly disposed person and it has never been put back. PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND Makes You Grow Strong Builds Nerve and Muscle; Makes the Blood Rich.

> When you are tired out and sick take Paine's Celery Compound. It cures and makes you grow strong and robust.

F. L. SKILLIN, West Somerville, Mass., writes: "We always use Paine's Celery Compound and give it to the children when they are run down or have any kind of nervous trouble. It builds them up, regulates the bowels, gives an appetite, and makes them strong. I am now giving it to our little boy five years old, and it is doing him much good."

His Plan to Destroy Trusts He Has Said Will Not Destroy Them.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 12.-Addressing a put every trust-made article on the free list."
In the Congressional Record the same Mr. Bryan is reported as saying: "I do not believe you can destroy all trusts by putting all trust-made articles on the free list, because if an article can be produced in this country as cheaply as it can be produced abroad, the trust could exist without the aid of any tariff."

Mr. Olmsted said it was quite in harmony with Democratic inconsistency on the subject of trusts to attempt their destruction by a method which admittedly would not destroy them, but while free trade would permit them to exist in great abundance, as they do now in England, it would absolutely destroy the less powerful and wealthy individual operators and would force labor into the unfortunate and un appy condition in which it was placed by the Wilson Tariff bill during the last Demoput every trust-made article on the free list."
